Sturgis is a really beautiful place, there is so much to do along the way, including visiting the Lewis and Clark National Park. When traveling, they don't stay in Sturgis, because it is very busy during the motorcycle rally and it can take an hour to get from one part of town to another. On average, about 500,000 people come to Sturgis. The streets are lined with shops and restaurants. The first year that Susan attended, there were over 1 million people there. There are mostly Harley's, but you can see so many different and unique bikes. You can also experience Buffalo crossing the road, they riders will just wait on the road while they make their way across the road.

South Dakota is beautiful, with many attractions including Devils Tower, Mount Rushmore and Crazy Horse, the Badlands and Needles.

Susan highly recommends visiting South Dakota, not just for Mount Rushmore, but to see all of the beauty in the surrounding areas.
